

Heather Lytle

Heather Lytle is completing her degree in Nursing at Montana State University. She will graduate in May 2011. Her general goal in life is “to support the underprivileged of this world that they might receive the most efficient and effective physical, emotional and spiritual support they deserve.” Her accomplishments include working with AIDS orphans in Africa for four years with Music for Life. She served as a volunteer tour leader with the African Children’s Choir and led 72 children from Uganda, Rwanda, Kenya and South Africa as they performed in venues that ranged from tiny churches to the G8 Summit in 2006, performing before 200,000 people. This provided full educational sponsorships through university level for these children. She also served as a field director in Nkomazi, South Africa, where she helped train a local team that now runs relief and development programs for 400 orphans in eleven villages and developed a registered boarding school for 42 orphaned students. Last summer she went as part of a medical team from Helena to provide services to the poor of Mozambique. This summer she will be working on an internship at the Mayo Clinic in pediatrics. Her future goal is to become a Nurse Practitioner and with Montana as her home base, become involved in establishing clinics for women and children in Africa.
